PREFATORY NOTE

The Bibliography of Virginia Larkin Redway, listing New York musicians, music publishers, and musical instrument makers, may seem a mechanical enough task to those who have never tried to make one; those who have studied the subject know that this is anything but the case. It requires patience and accuracy to complete a musical bibliography; there are also elements of detective research and scientific imagination constituting even more valuable assets.

In 1917 Miss Mabel Almy Howe made a beginning in this field with her "Music Publishers in New York City before 1850." That bibliography listed about fifty firms active in this city. Mrs. Redway's list adds more than sixty new names to this compilation.

This work will unquestionably be of use to librarians, collectors and dealers in their researches into Americana.

INTRODUCTION

THE PURPOSE of this work is to furnish a guide which will enable those interested in early New York music to date music imprints which bear no copyright date, but have the publisher's name and address merely, with perhaps a plate number.

As the first files of entire copies of copyright music, held in the Music Division of the Library of Congress, show no copyright date earlier than May 28, 1819, a book of this kind will help to solve the question of dating accurately early New York music.

The contents of the following lists are based on the New York directories from 1786; upon the files of copyright music in the Library of Congress in Washington, and upon examination of early New York music imprints.

Part I deals with those musicians, music professors and teachers whose names appear in the early directories of New York, beginning with the first directory of 1786. This list, however, does not represent the complete music picture of the early years, since there were many whose names do not appear in the directories in connection with music, but who nevertheless were dealing in it as a collateral activity.

John Jacob Astor, who came to this country in 1783, thought it financially worth his while not only to export furs, but to import musical instruments.[1] This interest of his was passed on to John and Michael Paff — later on to William Dubois. But information of this character is not contained in the directories.

Unrecorded in the directories were men of musical fame, who, passing through New York, did not stay long enough to have their names listed in the directories. Alexander Reinagle, composer, member of the Society of Musicians in London, later director of the famous Chestnut Street Theatre in Philadelphia, advertised in the New York Packet of June 26, 1786, a concert, shortly to be performed, to which he added the following information: "In the meantime he gives Lessons in Singing, on the Harpsicord, Pianoforte, and Violin. His terms may be known by enquiring at No. 19 King Street, and at Mr. Rivington's. N. B. He proposes to supply his Friends and Scholars with the best instruments and printed Music from London on the same terms they are there sold in the shops, only allowing for freight and package."

[1] Advertisement in the New York Packet, May 22, 1786: "Jacob Astor, No. 81, Queen-street, two doors from the Friends Meeting-House, Has just imported from London, An elegant assortment of Musical Instruments, such as piano fortes, spinnets, piano-forte guittars, guittars, the best of violins, German flutes, clarinets, hautboys, fifes, the best Roman violin strings, and all other kinds of strings, music books and paper, and every other article in the musical line, which he will dispose of on very low terms for cash."

Valuable information, such as the above, is not indicated in the directories, but is only to be found by careful perusal of the early newspapers.

Parts II and III comprise the names of the publishers, printer-lithographers, dealers and musical instrument makers for the first fifty years after the beginning of directory publishing in New York. Since many persons engaged in more than one field of music, their names have been listed in that section in which they were most active, with appropriate cross references from the other sections. The names are arbitrarily dropped after the 50th year (1835) except where a name continued as an engraver, printer or publisher or where a firm, which originally combined publishing and instrument making, continued as a piano-making establishment. The connections and ramifications of these names were carried through 1875.

The list also includes selected music publishers who started after the year 1835 and are brought up to the year 1876.

This work cannot attempt to give the full history of any of the music-publishing firms mentioned, except in so far as their dates and addresses in the directories bear witness to their beginning, development and decline.

Wherever in this guide, a name connected with music appears, it has been traced back at least two years, to ascertain if the same business was carried on by the same person. Economic pressure was evident, as shown by the frequent dropping of names from the list of musicians into the ranks of industry. These names were carried along, since some of them reappear in subsequent music activities. It has been thought advisable to list not only the business address, but also the residence of these musicians.

It appears, therefore, that music-publishing was done by musicians, musical instrument-makers, organbuilders, professors, teachers of music, lithographers, printers, engravers, booksellers, "depositories of art" and stationers, as well as by music publishers. Some, as in the cases of Benjamin Carr, James Hewitt and George Geib were composers as well as music publishers, but these were the exception rather than the rule, and were not indicated in the directories.

Part IV, that of the dancing masters, up to 1836, reveals the place that dancing and dancing instruction took in the community. Noah Webster has written an engaging description of New York, in the introduction to the directory of 1786, in which he quotes from Smith's History of New York (1757): "New York is one of the most social Places on the Continent. The Men collect themselves into weekly Evening Clubs. The Ladies, in Winter are frequently entertained either at Concerts of Musick or Assemblies and make a very good appearance. They are comely and dress well, and scarce any of them have distorted Shapes."

In contrast to this the editor of the New York directory of 1805 reported: "The most fashionable (diversions) are concerts, balls and theatrical amusements. The conductors of these, however, complain for want of support, and perhaps with reason. Here are very few people of fortune, except those who have acquired riches by their own industry; and these know the value of money too well to throw it away on trifling objects."

In spite of this rather jaundiced estimate of the value of concerts, balls and theatrical amusements, the editor of the same 1805 directory shows quite a different appreciation of the "Musicians" of his period as evidenced at the top of his classified directory.

> "All powerful harmony, that can assuage
> And calm the sorrows of the frenzied wretch
> Till lull'd with thy enchanting, grateful numbers
> He throws quite off the burthen that oppress'd him."

The capitalization and punctuation of the directory entries have been standardized but spelling and abbreviations have been given in the form employed by the directory. The word "street" has been consistently omitted in giving addresses. A list of the abbreviations used in the directories is appended.

Acknowledgment is due to Dr. Carleton Sprague Smith, Chief of the Music Division of The New York Public Library, who suggested the work; to Mrs. Amy Sinclair, Assistant Chief of the Music Division; to Mr. Daniel C. Haskell, Bibliographer of The New York Public Library; to Mr. Oliver Strunk; to the late Mr. Joseph Muller of Closter, N. J., for his invaluable advice and great musicological knowledge generously shared; to the many helpful friends of the music and genealogical staffs of The New York Public Library and to Dr. Otto Kinkeldey, Librarian of Cornell University, who first interested the compiler in the historical importance of early New York music.
